A delicious bowl of noodles is known for its healthy and fresh taste... as well as its... displeasing appearance. The noodles are from a basement restaurant at a run-down shopping centre in Hong Kong called, 'The Star Cafe'. The restaurant was opened in 1966 and has been open for 50+ years. The signature dish (also the most resenting) is tomato and egg sauce, on top of noodles or macaroni as well as a side topping of beef and more. Manager, Mr Lam, says, 'People mock the look, but are told that it is rather nice.' The Star Cafe staff are happy to continue working, although they have strong beliefs of demolition from Henderson Land Development.

Return to grassroots sport

On the 3rd of April 2021 grassroots sports returned in England, but as it stands at the time of writing, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are not proceeding yet. After schools opened on March 8th, Boris Johnson announced that sports such as football under the age of 18, tennis courts, golf courses and other outdoor sport facilities would return. Sports such as boxing, swimming and karate have been postponed until an unannounced date. Several people commented on their thoughts on grassroots sport return. Toby, age 10 from Lincolnshire explained, 'I think it is a good thing that the government is bringing back grassroots sports because it is a good way to bond.' Tom, age 36 from south London commented, 'I think that it can only be good for everyone. It gives people the chance to do the hobbies that they enjoy and love. Not only is this good physically but also mentally.' So, overall, a return to

Your thoughts on last week's news...

We have like a census to count children in school, so teachers know how many of us there are.

Krissy age 10

We need a census to determine if a city needs modifications. For example, if lots of young kids live in the area, they might build a playground or a day care for them, but if a lot of elderly people live by, they might build a nursing home. So, it's important to find things to alter.

Fannie age 10

I think we will need a census to take a moment to take in what is going on around us.
